Introduction to OpenGL Programming – Course Contents

1: Introduction to OpenGL
What Is OpenGL?
Your First Look at an OpenGL Program
OpenGL Syntax
OpenGL’s Rendering Pipeline

2: Shader Fundamentals
Shaders and OpenGL
OpenGL’s Programmable Pipeline
An Overview of the OpenGL Shading Language
Interface Blocks
Compiling Shaders
Shader Subroutines
Separate Shader Objects

3: Drawing with OpenGL
OpenGL Graphics Primitives
Data in OpenGL Buffers
Vertex Specification
OpenGL Drawing Commands
Instanced Rendering

4: Color, Pixels, and Framebuffers
Basic Color Theory
Buffers and Their Uses
Color and OpenGL
Multisampling
Testing and Operating on Fragments
Per-Primitive Antialiasing
Framebuffer Objects
Writing to Multiple Renderbuffers Simultaneously
Reading and Copying Pixel Data
Copying Pixel Rectangles

5: Viewing Transformations, Clipping, and Feedback
Viewing
User Transformations
OpenGL Transformations
Transform Feedback

6: Textures
Texture Mapping
Basic Texture Types 262
Creating and Initializing Textures
Proxy Textures
Specifying Texture Data
Sampler Objects
Using Textures
Complex Texture Types
Texture Views
Compressed Textures
Filtering
Advanced Texture Lookup Functions
Point Sprites
Rendering to Texture Maps
7: Light and Shadow
Lighting Introduction
Classic Lighting Model
Advanced Lighting Models
Shadow Mapping

8: Procedural Texturing
Procedural Texturing
Bump Mapping 433
Antialiasing Procedural Textures
Noise

9: Tessellation Shaders
Tessellation Shaders
Tessellation Patches
Tessellation Control Shaders
Tessellation Evaluation Shaders
A Tessellation Example: The Teapot
Additional Tessellation Techniques

10: Geometry Shaders
Creating a Geometry Shader
Geometry Shader Inputs and Outputs
Producing Primitives
Advanced Transform Feedback
Geometry Shader Instancing
Multiple Viewports and Layered Rendering

11: Memory
Using Textures for Generic Data Storage
Shader Storage Buffer Objects
Atomic Operations and Synchronization
Example

12: Compute Shaders
Overview
Workgroups and Dispatch
Communication and Synchronization
Examples